Historical Commission hears public comments on removing Confederate monuments

The Progressive Pulse

Roy Cooper. Clayton, like most mainstream North Carolina historians, observed the statues were not erected during the Civil War or even immediately thereafter, but years later when political campaigns of white supremacy led to their being put in places of government power. The monuments in question ...

At Appeals Court, Dems & Republicans Argue Over Judicial Primaries

WFAE

Roy Cooper. Democrats sued, arguing the law violated their freedom to associate in picking judge candidates. The full case goes to trial in June. Yesterday, lawyers argued over whether a federal judge was right in January to temporarily block part of the law. That judge ordered primaries for statewide ...

North Carolina tribes fear impact of Atlantic Coast Pipeline construction

Energy News Network

Left out of the formal permitting process, North Carolina's Lumbee Tribe and others seek a voice before pipeline construction crosses their land and waters. American Indian tribes in the path of the Atlantic Coast Pipeline are making an eleventh-hour plea to stop construction until regulators can ensure ...
